Hoover Proposal Given Delegates at Geneva Meet

Would Abolish Tanks, Chemicals and Movable Big Guns

PROHIBIT BOMBING

Reduction of Arms by One-Third Is Contemplated

BULLETIN

GENEVA, Switzerland.(AP)President Hoover's proposal for a smashing arms reduction was received with breathless silence here Wednesday when Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation, presented it to the disarmament conference.

The first reaction from the British careful, prudent approval in general terms; but the French received the announcement with frank hostility.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Hoover, in a sudden and dramatic announcement Wednesday, proposed principles for reducing the arms of the entire world by nearly one-third, stating that the time has come "when we should cut through the brush" and adopt arms reductions calculated to save between 10 and 15 billion dollars during the next ten years.

His announcement called for the abolition of tanks, chemical warfare and large mobile guns, the reduction by one-third the strength of all land armies over the so-called police component, a reduction in treaty number and tonnage of all battle-ships by one-third, the abolition of all bombing planes and the prohibition of bombardment from the air, a reduction in treaty tonnage of aircrafts carriers, cruisers and destroyers by onefourth, and submarines by one-third.

The plan was placed before the Geneva conferences Wednesday almost simultaneously with the reading of it to newspaper men.

Hugh S. Gibson is representing the United States at the disarmament conference now in session in the Swiss city.

Linked With War Debts

Addressing the disarmament delegates at Geneva, Hugh S. Gibson, American observer, told them there could be no American cancellation of war debts until Europe made progress in disarming.

At the Lausanne trade conference a week ago, Premier MacDonald said Great Britain would agree to cancellation of debts for the sake of improved international trade.

Herriot, of France, said that nation wouldn't agree to cancellation because it thought the tariff and other artificial bars were a greater impediment to world recovery than war debts.

Gibson's comment at Geneva was by way of a rejoinder to both the English and French, reminding them that America, as the largest was creditor of all, never would agree to cancellation until Europe showed her good faith by drastically cutting her military and naval forces.

Borah Approves

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who the other day said he would not support President Hoover on the Republican platform, Wednesday expressed approval of the president's plan to reduce world armaments.

Roosevelt Orders Walker to Reply

Calls Upon New York Mayor to Answer Seabury Charges

ALBANY, N. Y.—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt Wednesday called upon Mayor Walker of New York City to reply to charges brought against the mayor by Samuel Seabury, counsel to the Hofstadter legislative committee investigating the Democratic administration of the metropolis.

Seabury has already forced retirement of Sheriff Farley from office, and has ousted numerous other Tammany Hall office-holders.

His case against Mayor Walker is regarded as his crowning achievement, and there is much speculation as to what action Governor Roosevelt will take.

Walker, a protege of former Governor Alfred E. Smith, but more recently estranged from him, is strongly supported by much of the Tammany machine, with another faction standing by Smith, and independent Democrats supporting Governor Roosevelt, especially in the upstate districts.

Brookwood P.-T. A. to Serve Farm Visitors

Four hundred plate lunches will be served to visitors at the annual visiting day program at the Experiment station next Friday, June 24, it was announced by the Brookwood Parent-Teacher's association Wednesday. Sandwiches and cold drinks will also be served. Money derived from the sale will be used to carry on the benefit work of the association.

"Double Primary" Killed Wednesday By Committeemen

State Group Holds Only Legislature Can Authorize It

TOO MANY DANGERS

Run-Off Illegal, and No Supervision for Preferential Vote

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Democratic State Central Committee Wednesday killed the movement to hold a preferential or run-off primary for state offices this year.

Meeting on special call of Chairman Lamar Williamson, of Monticello, at 10 a. m. in a downtown hotel, the committee endorsed the preferential primary in principle and appealed to the voters to elect legislators favoring enactment of such legislation.

While public interest in a double primary was very strong, it was contended by many that it could not be held except under authority of a state law.

Preferential Sought

It was conceded before Wednesday's meeting that a run-off after the regular election day, August 9, would be illegal, and that only a preferential primary could be attempted, in advance of the regular primary. This was objected to, however, on the ground that since it was not strictly an election in the eyes of the law no accurate supervision could be obtained, there would only be the good faith of the candidates to make them abide by the result, and there would be no means of settling contests, in the event such should arise.

Checked Up to Voters

A resolution adopted by the committee 23 to 3 declared that it "lacked authority to call either a preferential or run-off primary under existing laws" and therefore merely "checked up the question to the voters."

The committee had previously voted down motions to call a preferential primary, and to name a committee to seek an agreement from all state candidates for such a primary, declining to give any consideration to the question.

Straw Vote Begun For Entire State

John P. Cox Drugstore Polling Part of 150-City Returns

John P. Cox Drug company, on Elm street, is participating in a state-wide straw vote on the gubernatorial and United States senate races which will report returns from 150 Arkansas cities.

Voting began Tuesday, June 21, and will continue througnout Thursday, June 30, at which time a statewide tabulation is to be made. Voting is already underway in brisk fashion at the Cox drugstore.

At the close of the balloting, three representative citizens will be chosen to act as judges during the counting.

Ohio Governor, Contender

George White Is Hero of Gold, Oil and U. S. Politics

Ohio's Favorite Son May Be Heard From at Chicago

PANIC RUINED DAD

Young White Became Newsboy After Great Panic of 1873

EDITOR'S NOTE—Following is the second in a series of five articles on favorite sons who will figure in the Democratic national convention.

By ROBERT TALLEY
NEA Service Writer

COLUMBUS, O.—A half century ago a boy whose father's business had been swept away by the panic of 1873 sold newspapers on the streets of Titusville, Pa.

A little later this boy put himself through high school by working after hours in a grocery store.

Next, he worked his way through Princeton. He got $150 a year from home and worked as a laborer on farms and in lumber camps during vacations.

After graduation he took a job as bookkeeper—and got fired. Unable to find work elsewhere, he became a laborer in the Pennsylvania oil fields.

Then, when he was 26, came the great Alaskan gold rush of 1898. With a pack of beans and bacon on his back, he trudged through Chilkoot Pass when it was 40 degrees below zero, stayed two years in the north, made his stake and came home. He settled down in Marietta, Ohio.

With his savings, he entered the oil business and prospered. Then he branched out into law and politics. He was elected to Congress for several terms and two years ago he was elected governor of Ohio.

Now his state is offering him for president and he enters the Democratic National Convention at Chicago with Ohio's 52 votes pledged to his support.

Such is the "From Newsboy to Riches" story of Governor George White of Ohio—and even Horatio Alger never wrote a more colorful one.

Hard as Nails

Six feet tall, raw-boned and rugged, Governor White is as hard as nails today, despite his 60 years. He has a craggy chin and deep-set blue eyes, a head that is almost hairless and a mouth that smiles on the slightest provocation. All his life he has been a man's man—but he knows how to wear dinner clothes when the occasion arises and he can find his way around at social functions without embarrassment.

His chief claims to the nomination are that he has made a good governor for Ohio and that, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1920, he met and favorably impressed many of the western and southern party leaders. His political acquaintanceship is indeed a wide one.

He is a dry, but a "reasonable" one. Years ago he was the Anti-Saloon League's spokesman in the Ohio Legislature and as a congressman he voted for all prohibition measures but as governor he has attempted no crusading. He was elected on the same ticket with Senator Robert J. Bulkley, a dripping wet. They even marched side by side in torchlight parades.

Governor White's supporters for the presidential nomination regard him as

Al Smith Speaks Only for Repeal

Ignores Roosevelt Fight on Arrival in Convention City

CHICAGO—(AP)—A call for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead act came from Alfred E. Smith Wednesday shortly after the 1928 campaigner arrived here to dispute the nomination of his former political friend Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It was the first statement on the convention scene restricted to prohibition and gave no hint of the intensity of the party dispute that is stirring the leaders.

Neither did it make mention of the coming contest over the permanent chairmanship, which will test the strength of the Roosevelt forces.

John Raskob, a Smith ally, announced Tuesday that he would support Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee, for the permanent chairmanship of the convention. Shouse is a target for the Roosevelt forces, who have avowed their intention of removing him.

Electrical Storm Misses This Area

Telephone Lines Damaged Between Gurdon and Prescott Tuesday

A high wind and electrical storm struck the area between Gurdon and Prescott late Tuesday, uprooting several trees and interfering with telephone communication. No other property damage was reported.

Hope telephone linemen were called to repair the damaged wires and restore communication. They worked most of Tuesday night.

A heavy rain was reported from Rosston and Bodcaw, both in the southwestern part of Nevada county.

Rainfall in Hope was light.

Gets Hat—Loses Arm

FORT WORTH, Texas—A gust of wind blew George McDaniels' hat off his head and on to the street car tracks. George went after the hat, caught up with it, reached out to get it, and lost his arm just as he grasped the hat. A street car, unseen by McDaniels, severed the member.

Garner Fined For Simple Assault

Former Hope Physician Defeats Serious Charge at Longview, Texas

LONGVIEW, Texas—(Special)—A jury in Gregg county district court late Tuesday night found Dr. W. M. Garner, prominent Longview physician, formerly of Hope, Ark., guilty of simple assault, and assessed a fine of $25.

The verdict was the result of an alleged attack on Deroy Ziegler, young Longview business man, last year. The state vigorously asked for an assault with intent to murder conviction.

The degense pleaded for the "sacred right to defend one's person."

Local Taxpayers To Meet Thursday

Mass Meeting to Form Association Called for 10 A. M.

A mass meeting of Hope and Hempstead county citizens has been called for 10 o'clock Thursday morning at Hope city hall to organize a taxpayers association, it was announced Wednesday morning.

If successful, the meeting will proceed with the selection of officers and a permanent organization.

This is the first attempt to form a taxpayers' league, units of which have been organized in many counties of Arkansas and in most of the states of the nation. Reorganization of government and greater economy, to permit reduction of taxes, are expected to be discussed at the meeting Thursday morning.

Air Picnics

WENATCHEE, Wash.—Unusual picnics are being enjoyed in isolated mountain beauty spots through the medium of airplanes. Several Wenatcheeites are chartering planes and flying to picnic grounds on one of the mountains south of here. There are several cleared spaces for landing on the mountains, on which there are no auto roads.

Lights Speed Planes

LONDON.—By equipping airdromes in South Africa with lights, the trip from Salisbury in Rhodesia to Cape Town has been speeded up. Previously this flight was made entirely in the day time, but the fligh tis now made, with both day and night flying, in fifteen and a half hours. A train trip over the same distance requires 68 hours.

Enlarged Assouan Dam Reclaims Millions of Arid Egypt Acres

By NEA Service

CAIRO, Egypt—By means of a constructional development which will rival the immensity of monuments and pyramids of ancient Pharaohs, modern Egypt hopes to dam up the Nile river, backbone of agriculture in this country, and increase the fertility of the 6,500,000 acres of Egyptian land now under cultivation.

The largest unit in the modern irrigation project is the Assouan dam on the upper Nile. This dam, constructed in the early part of the 12th century, will be heightened 29½ feet, and its retaining walls will hold back for irrigation purposes 5,000,000,000 cubic meters of water.

In connection with this project is the construction in the near future of a reservoir near Gebel Aulia, on the White Nile, which will have a capacity of 2,200,000,000 cubic meters of water.

Reclaim 750,000 Acres

This extensive irrigation project of the Egyptian government will, when completed, have reclaimed 400,000 acres of land in the northern delta and will have converted 350,000 acres along the middle and upper Nile.

The object of the Assouan dam, as originally proposed, was to store water for requirements of 330,000 acres converted in middle Egypt from basin to perennial irrigation. The dam was originally built 128 feet high and more than a mile across. The cost of construction was about $15,000,000.

In 1904 it was found necessary to protect the rock downstream of the dam by erecting masonry aprons. This work took two years to accomplish and cost a million and a half dollars. The storage capacity of the dam was increased and 110,000 acres of desert land in middle Egypt were added when the dam was gain heightened by more than 16 feet from 1907 to 1912.

It is expected that the latest en-

Price Is Reduced To 50 Cents; City Vote Is Uncertain

Company Is Week Late Complying With Commission Order

ELECTION JULY 1ST

Proposal for Municipal Plant Up to Referendum

Following passage of a resolution by the city council Tuesday night authorizing a special election July 1 on the question of whether the city shall construct a municipal ice plant, the Southern Ice & Utilities Co. at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning ordered its Hope plant to cut the delivered coupon price from 60 to 50 cents per hundred.

It is uncertain whether the city will now proceed with its municipal plant election.

$15,000 Appropriated

The city council already has appropriated $15,000 for the construction of a municipal plant, plans for which call for the utilization of electric current from the city's municipally-owned-and-operated light and water plant.

Although the council is believed to have authority to make such an appropriation, it was deemed advisable Tuesday night to put the people on record with a referendum, which accordingly may be held Friday, July 1.

Company Week Late

Although the ice company finally complied with the Arkansas Railroad Commission, it was nearly a week late in doing so, the order having been made effective last Thursday, June 16.

The first of this week, discovering that deliverymen were still charging the old rate of 60 cents, the city made formal protest to the Railroad Commission—and the company complied with the commission order Wednesday.

Weeds Ordered Cut

At its meeting Tuesday night the city council ordered the street department to supervise the cutting of weeds on all property in the city, particularly vacant sites where real mosquito menaces have been permitted to develop. That is part of the clean-up campaign which has been under way since spring.

The police committee instructed city policemen to stop and warn all auto drivers appearing inside the corporate limits after dark without tail-lights.

Fatal and near-fatal accidents in this area recently have been attributed to the failure of motorists to provide tail-lights, it was brought out in discussion.

Ex-Aide Robinson Drowning Victim

Carey W. Martin, 38, Had Been Missing Since Sunday

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The body of a man found floating in the Arkansas river near here Tuesday was identified Wednesday as that of Carey W. Martin, 38, clerk and stenographer and former member of the secretarial staff of Senator Joe T. Robinson.

He had been missing from home since Sunday. An autopsy disclosed no evidence of violence. He was fully clothed.

Carey leaves a widow.

Unemployed Aid Pushed Forward

Johnson Says Administration Wants Adjournment Before Action

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Despite the failure of efforts to limit debate the senate Wednesday pressed forward its 2-billion-dollar Democratic unemployment relief bill, with leaders hopeful of a vote before nightfall.

Meanwhile, Senator Johnston, Republican, California, charged that the administration was trying to force adjournment before the relief bill was passed.

Senator LaFollette objected to the proposal by Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, to limit debate, saying he wanted time to present his case for an amendment he had offered to increase the proposed public works bond issue from half billion to 5½ billion dollars.

Roosevelt and Walker

OPPONENTS of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Democratic National Convention opening at Chicago next Monday are attempting to make political capital out of the governor's failure to remove James J. Walker as mayor of New York City.

Walker is charged with accepting favors from contractors, and is accused of owning stock and bonds of corporations engaged in municipal work. As the result of Samuel Seabury's investigations in behalf of the Hofstadter committee, a pretty clear case seems to be proved against the metropolitan mayor.

But whether Governor Roosevelt is morally bound to remove him, even though the law gives him to right to, is another question.

It all depends on what view you take toward American government.

If you take a paternalistic view, in which the government is the custodian of its people's morals, and each superior division of government is responsible for the conduct of each inferior branch, why then, you must believe that Governor Roosevelt is morally bound to remove Walker as mayor of New York.

But—if you happen to believe that government, being only another name for the collective people, is utterly incapable of rising above their moral level, and that therefore each division and subdivision of government must rest squarely with the individual voters, why then you will scoff at the idea that Governor Roosevelt is the custodian of the good morals of Mayor Walker and the people of the City of New York.

There are six million Americans in New York City, millionaires, famous judges and attorneys, expert economists, and more than a dozen world-famous newspapers. Is it possible that with all this population, this wealth and brains and capacity for self-criticism, the City of New York requires outside action in order to clean up its own house?

You don't believe it, and I don't.

The New York Times broke up the corrupt Tweed ring in Tammany Hall two generations ago, single-handedly. And every so often the people of the City of New York have risen to set their shaken house in order.

I don't take any stock in this business of a superior government interfering with and "reforming" an inferior government.

Such "reform" accomplishes nothing. It doesn't change the mind of the voters, any more than machine-gun fire changes the mind of discontented rebels. Force never accomplishes anything in government—and what we have got to see is that this imposition of the will of a superior government upon an inferior one is an arbitrary use of force, with law substituted for machine-guns.

I never have believed that the Senate of the United States has any right to censor the men duly elected to that body from the individual sovereign states, whether for private morals or the conduct of state elections.

I did not believe that the senate had any right to bar William Vare, from Pennsylvania; Smith, from Illinois—or, only recently, its challenge of the seating of Senator Bankhead from Alabama. Vare and Smith, admittedly corrupt, were barred; Bankhead, eventually given a clean bill of health, was seated.

But this is a dangerous and demagogic practice—the setting up of a superior government as the judge and jury of good government, rather than the rank and file of the people, from whom all law and order and decency must eventually flow in a democracy.

I do not write this as a brief for the nomination of Governor Roosevelt by the Democratic party. I am only concerned with the policy of good government involved in the quarrel between the State and the City of New York.

As far as Roosevelt and the Democratic nomination are concerned, I believe the Democratic leaders are thinking more about New York state's 90 electoral votes than the qualifications of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt might make a good president. My own preference would be Newton D. Baker of Cleveland.

Either way, it doesn't matter. The Democratic nominee will be the next president—and you can count on the Democratic party nominating a man of courage and ability, just as it has always done when the country turned to it in a crisis: Grover Cleveland, after the Republican scandals of two generations ago; and Woodrow Wilson, when Republican sponsored trusts and Republican graft had allowed moneyed men to dominate the nation almost completely.

Real Bad Man

PORTLAND, Ore.—A bold bandit with no respect for policemen made Patrolman E. W. Green feel rather out of place recently. The bandit approached Green when the latter was parked in his car. He shoved a gun into the policeman's side, took the latter's gun away from him, and made him drive him to the outskirts of the town. He then helped himself to the officer's car.

GEORGE WHITE

a logical compromise candidate. They say he is dry enough to suit the politically arid south and west, not too dry for the dripping east.

Student of Wilson

As a student at Princeton, White studied under Woodrow Wilson and, in 1895, joined with his classmates in voting Wilson the university's most popular professor.

"But it wasn't Wilson who made a Democrat of me," the governor says. "I think I turned Democrat because of the tariff issue when I was a student in political economy under Professor Daniels."

Leaving Princeton, White drifted from a bookkeeper's job to that of a laborer in the Pennsylvania oil fields and then joined the gold rush to Alaska where wealth beckoned and danger lurked.

With E. E. Andrews, a friend, he landed at a little port near Skagway in January, 1898, and joined the wild race for the interior. Their course led over the dread Chilkoot Pass, with its snow and ice and bitter cold, where hundreds died and thousands turned back. But White and Andrews, each with 50 pounds of bacon and beans on his back, pushed on.

"The Latin and Greek I had studied at Princeton didn't help me much there," Governor White smiled, as he told of this adventure.

"Every man thought he had a gold mine waiting for him. So it was every man for himself. You couldn't hire anybody to carry provisions for you, because every man was carrying his own supplies."

In the Gold Country

White and Andrews finally reached the gold country. They failed to strike gold, so they went into the wood business. They hired men in need of a grubstake to cut the fir and pine for $3 a cord. Then they rafted the wood down to Dawson and sold it for $40 a cord to dance halls and gambling houses.

With the money earned in the wood business, White and Andrews went back to gold hunting. They bought a claim.

"Soon as we began to make money we hired six men at $1 an hour to help us," White relates. "By this time, 80 per cent of the men were out of money and working for the other 20 per cent. We had a doctor and two lawyers working on the end of shovels for us."

In two years, White made a comfortable stake, sold out ot the Guggenheims and returned to the states.

Boyhood Sweetheart

One of the first things he did was to go to Titusville and marry his boyhood sweetheart, Miss Charlotte McKelvey. They moved to Ohio where White started out in his career as a "quart can" oil producer, to use his own words.

His oil interests soon spread from Ohio to Pennsylvania and even to Oklahoma, and he made money. Then he branched into law and politics and was elected to the legislature in 1905. Three years later he was a candidate for congress, but was defeated. In 1910, he ran again and was elected. He was re-elected to congress in 1912 and 1914.

When former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio was nominated for the presidency in 1920, White was named chairman of the Democratic National Committee to manage the campagin.

In 1928, White sought the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate and was defeated. That defeat was generally interpreted as ending his political career.

Stages Comeback

In 1930, however, he staged a comeback and was elected governor. There was nothing sensational about his campaign. It was based largely on criticism of the policies of his Republican predecessor, who was running for re-election, and a denunciation of the idea that government can make men prosperous.

Since the death of Mrs. White in 1929, Governor White's eldest daughter, Miss Mary White, has been his hostess. She serves in this capacity at the Executive Mansion here and will so serve at the White House, as the nation's "First Lady," if her father should be elected president.

There are four other children, three sons and a daughter. The engagement of the latter, Miss Charlotte White, was announced just recently. The sons are George, Jr., Robert and David McKelvey White. The latter is a teacher at New York University.

Though reared in Pennsylvania, Governor White is a native of New York. He was born at Elmira on August 21, 1872. His father, who had a small retail business, went on the rocks financially in the panic of 1873 and as the result the family moved to Titusville when he was very young.

Glorifying Yourself

DON'T BE "OBVIOUS" IN YOUR MAKEUP

Don't let your makeup be too conspicuous in summer. Of course, it should manage to be as soft and flattering as possible at all times, but a too-brilliant pair of lips that will be forgiven when there are snowflake in the air can't beg anybody's pardon for their existence when the days are hot and the mere mention of bright red makes everyone's temperature go up a few more degrees.

In summer, people want to think of beauty as something fragrant, lovely, pastel-toned. It must be healthy and vibrant, of course. The pale-cheeked lass who fainted on the slightest provocation has done a permanent fade-out. But beauty should be as natural as possible.

Since your frocks are probably following a softer color scheme, your makeup should do the same. The shade of the blouse may quarrel with your rouge. If it does, nobody is going to be sorry when you leave the clubhouse veranda. It is much better to err on the side of too-little color than too much when the sunshine is blistering the grass and the tinkle of ice in tall glasses is the loveliest sound the day can offer.

Make sure that your lipstick and your face rouge sound the same color note. Don't use a lipstick that has a purple slant and a rouge that leans to yellow. They will make your face appear to have been decorated for circus day. Above everything, you want to avoid a poster effect.

Many people prefer to use a soft, creamy paste rouge which will serve both for lips and cheeks.

Don't spread your rouge over undefined areas on your face. Use it in the place where it gives your face the approved contour and adds a sparkle to your eyes.

Powder which is heavy should be removed from your summer dressing table. Something light, fluffy, cooling will answer the purpose just as well.

ENLARGED ASSOUAN

lergement of the dam will offer water to aid rice cultivation in the northern delta, and provide irrigation all along the valley of the Nile.

U. S. Engineer Aids

The work of enlarging the dam has been handled by an International Technical Commission appointed by the Egyptian government. The commission is composed of Colonel Hugh L. Cooper, American engineer; H. E. Gruner of Switzerland, and W. J. E. Binnie of England.

The greatest difficulty to face them was how to increase the height of the dam and increase its thickness before the height was added.

The plan finally decided on called for sliding buttresses, leaning on, but not bonded to, the downstream surface of the dam.

The actual operation of increasing the height is being carried out in alternate sections. Engineering practice demands that this method be followed instead of building and heightening wall in one operation, since it is a fact that all masonry structures develop cracks due to contraction.

Sealed with Asphalt

Four months after the sections have been built and allowed to set, the intermediate sections are constructed. An asphalt seal is inserted in the joints between each pair of sections, the upstream surface of the joints being caulked with lead wool.

Each asphalt seal is provided with pipes so that at any future time the seal may be tightened up with steam.

Another interesting feature of the work to be done is the reinforcement of the upstream surface of the solid dam by means of hollow stainless steel rods, to resist possible tension on the upper portion of the dam when the reservoir is full.

Little Flour Girl

More than food for the needy is contained in the sacks of flour which the Red Cross is distributing throughout the nation. The Red Cross is organizing sewing classes to make clothes—like the jumper dress worn here by little Miss Phyllis Smith of Washington—out of the sacks themselves.

Bert Nelson Counted on for U. S. Scoring in Olympiad

Pretty lucky, for Uncle Sam, that Bert Nelson of Butler University decided to go consistent this Olympic year. It may mean quite a lot to the United States when high jump points are totaled this summer at Los Angeles.

Nelson today is probably the best collegiate high jumper in the country. His coach, Herman Phillips, who placed in the 1928 Olympic 400-meter dash —believes he may clear 6 feet 10 inches before the summer ends. He's only about two inches shy of that height at this stage.

Nelson began a high jumping career his senior high school year, placing second in the Illinois interscholastic meet with a leap of 6 feet 2 inches. As a freshman at Butler in 1928-29, he took the national junior championship at 6 feet 4 7-8 inches. Then began a series of erratic performances as a member of the Butler carsity team.

In his first collegiate competition, Nelson set what was then a world indoor record, a leap of 6 feet 6 3-4 inches. He defeated Bob King, 1928 Olympic winner, that same season. But he also was defeated frequently, often losing at heights only an inch or two above six feet.

This year his coach started to reform him. Phillips advised a run at the standards almost twice the length he had been using. Alomst immediately, Nelson showed improvement. His records this year, in their chronological order, have been 6 feet 2 3-4 at the Kansas Relays, a tie for first; 6 feet 3 3-4 inches at the Drake Relays, first; 6 feet 6¼ inches at Indiana little state meet, first; 6 feet 4 3-4 inches in Missouri Valley games, first; 6 feet 7 3-8 inches in Indiana big state contests, first; and 6 feet 7 7-8 inches in Central Intercollegiates, first, setting a new American collegiate mark.

Nelson is the one man successfully using his unorthodox jumping form. Coach Phillips calls it an outside jump—and mabye that's right. Anyway, Nelson approaches the bar from directly in front. He starts as a scissors jumper would, jumping from the front and taknig off with his left foot. As his right foot, the one he kicks up, goes over the bar, he leans backward and faces upward. He then rolls to his right, dragging his left leg over as he falls. It's a simple trick, if you know how to do it. Nelson knows how.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By Laura Lou Brookman

©1932 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan, leaves home and, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her.

They are married and for the first time Cherry finds out what it means to lack money. Her struggles with housework are discouraging. DIXIE SHANNON, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome MAX PEARSON, who also works on the News.

Cherry receives a letter from her mother enclosing a check for $500. She returns the check because pride will not let her keep it. A young woman living in the same apartment building attempts suicide and is taken to a hospital. Cherry sends the girl some flowers, and while down town meets Pearson who takes her to luncheon.

Dan undertakes to write a short story, becomes discouraged and leaves it unfinished. Two days later Cherry is summoned to see a caller.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

HE was a young man wearing a chauffeur's uniform. Cherry caught sight of him before she had reached the foot of the stairs and rushed forward.

"Martin! Is anything wrong?"

The young man hesitated. "Dr. Knowles sent me, Miss Cherry," he said. "He said I should bring you home. It's your mother—she's been sick all week and today—"

"Mother! You mean—oh, Martin, you don't mean—you don't mean it's serious?"

"All I know is you're to come at once," the chauffeur told her gravely. "The doctor's been there since morning. He said—"

The last words were lost as Cherry went flying up the stairway. She called over her shoulder, "Just a minute! I'll be right back!"

It was scarcely longer than that until she was stepping into the big Dunbar limousine. Martin closed the door after her and took the wheel. They spun around a corner and the car's speed increased. Martin, the perfect chauffeur, was driving more recklessly than Cherry had ever seen him.

Still it was not fast enough.

"Can't we go faster?" Cherry urged. "Can't we hurry?"

There was no answer. The big car was certainly traveling above the speed limit. Cherry cowered in one corner of the rear seat. Her face was pale, her eyes dark with fright and anxiety.

"It can't be!" she told herself over and over again. "It can't be Mother's going to die! God wouldn't do a thing like that. Oh, why does it take so long? Why can't we hurry?"

Her two hands were clenched tightly together. The words she had been mumbling formed themselves into a sort of prayer. Mother—hurry—must get well—save her—save her!

They echoed through the girl's brain. "Mother—hurry—must get well—"

THE car whirled into another street. They were half way there now. A truck, heavily loaded, was coming toward them. It swerved suddenly to avoid another vehicle and Martin barely kept the fenders of the limousine from brushing against it. Cherry, in her corner, did not even notice what had happened.

"She's worried over me!" the girl thought bitterly. "It's because of what I've done that she's ill. If she dies it will be my fault—!"

No! She could not go on thinking such things. She did not dare to! Cherry pressed both hands to her temples. She closed her eyes and tried to tell herself that in just a little while now she would see her mother and know that everything was going to be all right. Her mother had never been seriously sick before. Of course she would recover!

They had reached Sherwood boulevard now. There was less traffic and the limousine was going faster. Familiar houses, buildings Cherry had passed hundreds and hundreds of times, flashed past. There was the little' drug store. There the Marshalls' brick house. Another minute and they had turned into the drive before Briartop.

Cherry had one hand on the door as the chauffeur halted the car. She was outside and half way to the door before Martin had climbed from his seat.

The door opened and Cherry almost plunged into the arms of a woman in cap and apron.

"Martha!" Cherry exclaimed. "How is she?"

"Thank the good Lord you've come, Miss Cherry," the servant answered devoutly. "I said all along they should send for you—"

"But how is she?" the girl begged.

Martha brushed her eyes with her handkerchief. She shook her head. "The doctor's upstairs," she said. "He won't let any of us in the room with her. You'll have to ask Dr. Knowles."

She put the handkerchief to her eyes again. Cherry ran swiftly up the stairs. A nurse in a white uniform was coming out of Mrs. Dixon's room.

"I'm Cherry," the girl said. "I've come to see Mother—"

The nurse shook her head negatively. "I'm sorry," she said, "the doctor is with Mrs. Dixon. He's given instructions that no one is to be admitted."

"But Dr. Knowles sent for me!"

The nurse made a signal indicating quiet. "Yes, I know," she said in a hushed voice. "I'll tell him you're here. A little later perhaps you can see your mother. The slightest excitement just now would be dangerous. You'll have to excuse me—"

The nurse continued her way down the hall.

THE girl shut her eyes in agony. Her hands, twisted into fists, pounded together. "Oh, God!" the girl prayed desperately, "make her get well! Don't let her die, dear God!"

She felt a hand on her shoulder and looked up. Sarah O'Fallon was standing beside her.

"There, darlin'," Sarah whispered gently, "don't take it so hard!"

The girl buried her face in Sarah's apron. Suddenly the tears, long pent up, streamed down her face. Cherry wept quietly, her shoulders shaking with the deep sobs. She had never faced death before. She had scarcely thought about it. Now in the face of this terrible experience she was realizing how deep had been her love for her mother. Happy times in her childhood—all the joy that had come into that big house her mother had brought.

"I—can't—bear it—Sarah!" she cried brokenly. "I—can't bear it!"

The older woman murmured reassuringly. Cherry's weeping continued, gradually becoming quieter.

They heard a door open and close. Cherry looked up and saw Dr. Knowles coming toward them. She arose.

The doctor nodded. He said, "Good afternoon, Cherry. Glad you're here. Shall we go where we can talk?"

He motioned toward Cherry's own bedroom farther down the hall. The girl followed, dabbing at her eyes to dry them and clinging to Sarah.

"Why won't anyone tell me how she is, doctor?" she begged. "Why won't you let me see my Mother?"

"Now, now!" Dr. Knowles began. "Don't be hysterical. You're letting your feelings run away with you."

"But, doctor—?"

"Your mother is very sick, Cherry," the doctor went on. "It's best to face the facts. For years she's gone on believing she was in good health while all the time this condition was coming on. It's her heart."

He stopped at the stricken look on the girl's face. "We're not sure how serious this may be," he went on slowly. "A little while ago she dropped off to sleep. That's why I gave orders she wasn't to be disturbed. It's the first sleep she's had in 48 hours. Perhaps it will save her. I sent for you, Cherry, because—well, I thought you'd want to be here."

"Of course! Oh, doctor, surely you can do something! You mustn't—you mustn't let anything happen—"

"We're doing everything possible," he assured her. "I've had two specialists here for consultation. She has splendid nurses. You may be sure that everything in our power will be done to bring her to a speedy recovery."

"Doctor," Cherry faced him directly, "you're not just—saying these things to make me feel better? You really believe she has a chance?"

Dr. Knowles put a hand on the girl's arm. "I told you the condition is serious," he repeated. "I've thought—well, if she rallies as I hope she will after this rest I thought your being here might do a great deal. She's missed you these last weeks, Cherry."

The girl had turned away. "I know," she said miserably. "I know!"

"I'm leaving now," Dr. Knowles announced, "but I'll be back within an hour. If there's the slightest change the nurse knows where to reach me. The best thing for you to do is to try to quiet yourself. I'll let you see your mother just as soon as it's wise."

HE was gone. Sarah, who had been listening all the while, came across the room.

"Maybe if you'd lie down, honey," she said softly, "you'd feel better. You'd best do like the doctor says and try to just be quiet."

Cherry shook her head. "I couldn't, Sarah. But don't bother about me. I'll be all right."

The older woman put her arms around the girl. "We've got to pray!" she said fervently. "It's only the Lord who can help us now. We've got to pray he'll spare your mother, darling."

Cherry's face seemed to have taken on a mask-like quality. "Yes," she said as though she had not understood the words, "pray. That's it." Her voice had become a monotone. "That's what we have to do—pray."

She sank to the luxurious satin cushions of the chaise longue. Sarah regarded her uncertainly for a moment and then turned and left the room.

For Cherry it was the beginning of a vigil that seemed endless. She sat amid surroundings that had once been as familiar as her own features in the mirror. The room was done in rose and blue. The ivory-tinted furniture. That window looking out over the garden. This carpet, soft as down beneath her feet. All of it was exactly as it had been and yet everything was different.

"I'm to blame," the girl told herself bitterly. "It's my fault. If Mother dies I'm the one who'll be responsible!"

The tears would not come now. Cherry sat immobile as a statue. Once when she heard footsteps in the hall she arose and went to the door. It was the nurse again. She put a finger to her lips and shook her head.

Cherry returned to her seat. After a time she heard steps again and knew it was the doctor.

Sunset came and then dusk. The sky outside was darkening when someone entered the room.

"Father!" Cherry exclaimed, half-rising.

The man on the threshold said grimly, "Dr. Knowles is waiting."

German Beats Jack Sharkey in 15 Rounds, But Split Decision Gives Away Championship—Crowd, Radio and Newspapers Boo Outrageous and Corrupt Judgment

Radio fans following the Schmeling-Sharkey fight in Hope and Hempstead county Tuesday night were amazed and shocked at the conclusion of 15 rounds to hear the announcer say that by a split decision of one judge and the referee the world's championship had been taken away from the German Max Schmeling and given to the Slovak Jack Sharkey.

The boos of the Long Island crowd of 70,000 persons echoed over the radio for fully five minutes after the announcement.

Schmeling, the aggressor all the way, seemed to radio fans to have won seven or eight rounds, with Sharkey two or three, and the rest even. Morning newspapers Wednesday bore out this impression, ringside scorers giving Schmeling nine of the fifteen rounds.

Sharkey showed a brief flash in the fifth, but after the tenth he was in some distress, with one eye virtually closed, and absorbing a steady drumfire of punches as the German walked into him.

Schmeling Improves

Schmeling fought a carbon-copy of his fight against Stribling, but showed even greater improvement since then than he showed between the first fight with Sharkey and the encounter with Stribling.

On the other hand, Sharkey put up the cleanest exhibition of his career. Once he struck low in the sixth round—and the crowd booed him, expecting another of these freak fights which Sharkey usually terminates with a foul about the fifth, sixth or seventh rounds. But the German proved not to be hurt, and both fighters came out smiling.

Fans were outraged over the decision ,especially in view of newspaper prophecies the last week that there would be a slim attendance, which gave rise to the suspicion that the promoters, or Sharkey's handlers, or possibly Schmeling's managers also, had sold out to the gamblers and corrupted the referee and the judges.

Gunboat Smith, retired heavyweight and sometime motion picture actor, was the referee. He and one of the judges, George Kelly, voted for Sharkey. The other judge, Charles Mathison, cast his vote for Schmeling.

The fight was braodcast by NBC, with Graham McNamee and Charles Francis (Socko) Coe, Saturday Evening Post novelist, alternating at the announcer's job, each taking every three rounds.

Westbrook Pegler

Newspaper comment Wednesday morning bore out radio fans' impression of the fight. Westbrook Pegler, Chicago Tribune expert writing in the Arkansas Gazette, said:

The crowd loosed a large roar at the decision from which it was impossible to determine whether the decision was popular or otherwise, but all along the working press row and in the preferred customers' row, close up to the ring, the opinon plainly preferred Schmeling and resented, if it did not actually suspect, the official judgment.

Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, a skinny little citizen of Hell's Kitchen, grabbed a microphone as the broadcasters popped into the air the consternation following the decision, and babbled his soul into the night air.

"I don't want anyone to think I am a poor sport," Jacobs said. His sharp free hand in a persuasive gesture that freeh and in a persuasive gesture that would have sold a dress suit to a dock-walloper. "I don't think I'm a poor sport. But my boy didn't lose the fight in this bowl tonight. He was robbed."

Mayor Walker Critical.

Speaking to the German populace over an international hook-up, Jimmy Walker, the mayor, exclaimed in English: "That is the rottenest decision I ever heard in my life."

Hans Reichman, a German journalist, who was in charge of these proceedings, turned to Walker and asked "do you really want me to say that in my translation?"

"Don't you want to say it?" the mayor asked.

"Sure," Reichman said. "I'm a German and I think it was rotten, too. but I may be prejudiced."

"Well, you may go ahead and say it for me," Walker said.

The receipts, gathered in, at a rate of admission ranging from $23 downward to $2.30, were almost as startling as the decision. The fight was the first held in the new saucer, scooped out, paved and furnished within the space of three months, and the mob closed in on the arena in increasing density from 5 o'clock until 9, when the place seemed full.

Sharkey received 10 per cent of the net money and Schmeling 42½ per cent.

Schmeling Wins Nine Rounds

Schmeling had won at least nine rounds by the score of many of the serious statisticians who sat in the press rows putting down chicken-track jottings on sheets of paper to indicate jabs, hooks, swings and blocked punches.

Sharkey had clearly lost four of the last five rounds which he fought with his left eye sealed almost shut and that side of his face grotesquely swollen. Neither fighter was knocked down, neither one slipped down and, to give the men no more than their due, each man fought more than half the way with careful thought for what might be done to him if he let one fly. Schmeling was blocking Sharkey's hooks and swings for the head, or drawing away to let them sail by or glance off. Sharkey seemed to be fighting for his self-control at all times until the last round when he tore out of his corner swinging and apparently hoping to redeem a hopeless affair with one mad, lucky swipe. The swollen eye had reduced his visibility from the eleventh round on, and he had been taking a rather persistent beating about the head in this stage of the battle, although it need not be suspected that he was in danger of a knockout event then.

Other Views

Here's the opinion of other fight writers on the decision.

Francis Wallace:

Ringside opinion was against Sharkey after the fight, as it had been before. The majority of critics thought he had lost. I picked Sharkey and certainly did not look upon his efforts with unfriendly eyes. But the best I had given him was a draw—seven rounds for each and one even. Furthermore, Schmeling had been the aggressor throughout. The worst he should have had was a draw and that was not enough to take his championship away.

Paul Gallico:

The customers always pay! It is with deep pain that I must report that some 70,000 clients, many of whom were bilked by this same event two years ago were hornswoggled again this evening.

The two allegedly best, strongest and most lethal heavyweights in the world, spent the evening jabbing one another's nose, caressing one another's necks, and patting one another's heads which carried no dynamite whatever. There were no knockdowns. Sharkey went into a 15-round retreat. Schmeling chased him and beyond the closing of Sharkey's left eye and the puffing of his face, nothing happened.

Whether Schmeling was swindled out of his title will be something for the boys to argue about deep into the long winter nights. The one thing that will permit of no argument is that the spectators who had paid high prices in hard times for a thrill didn't get it. Sharkey refused to fight and Schmeling, not in the same physical condition that he was in Cleveland when he stopped Willie Stribling, showed nothing faintly resembling his great knockout punch.

Storm Prevents Visit of Gurdon

Clark County Team Unable to Appear for Game Thursday

A baseball game between the Hope Storks and Gurdon was postponed at Fair park Tuesday afternoon when the Gurdon team failed to show up.

A heavy wind and rain storm that broke between Gurdon and Prescott caused the visiting team to return home, Manager Coop of the Storks told The Star.

Admission price to the game was returned to most fans; however, a few failed to call for their money. Manager Coop said that those who failed to receive their money would be admitted free to the next game.

After Gurdon failed to arrive, a four-inning practice game was played between the Storks and the American Legion Junior team, which resulted in favor of the Juniors, 3 to 2. Lawrence Martin pitched for the Juniors, while Wallace Cook, regular short-stop of the Stork team, did the pitching for his mates.

The Storks go to Foreman Sunday, where they meet that team for the first time this season.

Rocky Mound Beats Hopewell Team 9-0

Rocky Mound defeated Hopewell 9 to 0 in a well-played baseball game at Rocky Mound last Saturday.

The Rocky Mound team has played nine games this season, suffering its only defeat at the hands of the Schooley boys, in one out of a series of three games.

Rocky Mound is scheduled to play at Bodcaw next Saturday afternoon, June 25.

Guard Will Meet Bradley Thursday

Company "A" in Game at Fair Park at 3:30 O'Clock

Company "A" Sharpshooters of the Hope National Guard, claiming to be undefeated in an official game this season, is scheduled to play a baseball team from Bradley at Fair park Thursday afternoon. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Thursday's battle will mark the first appearance here of a Bradley team against the Sharpshooters this season, while the Hope Storks split a two-game series with Bradley one being played at Fair park, and the other on the Bradley diamond.

Eubanks will probably pitch for the Sharpshooters and Harrell will work behind the plate.

The Dixon-Horney team, of the Texarkana city league, will play the Guardsmen at Fair park Sunday afternoon.

White Paper May Be Made of Pine

Discovery to Permit Manufacture of Newsprint in the South

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(AP)—One of the greatest commercial opportunities ever opened in the South, discovery that white paper can be made from virtuallp all its pine forests, was announced here Monday.

White paper chemical pulp, made for th first time from long leaf and loblolly pines, 80 per cent of the South's pine forests, was prepared for exhbiition to a meeting of the Georgia Forestry Association Wednesday at Rome.

The new method of making paper was announced by Dr. Charles S. Herty of New York, former president of the American Chemical Society. The process is a development of his discovery two years ago that, contrary to a 50-year-old belief, white paper and newsprint can be made from slash pine.

Long leaf and loblolly, the new white paper pines, cover 100,000,000 acres, not only constituting the bulk of Southern forests, but also being scattered through the states of Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Texas and Oklahoma.

Hope, Arkansas.

Dear Mr. Washburn:

Our Engineering Department has kept a careful check upon the standard of appearance and printing of your paper.

We are pleased to advise you that a high per cent of standard has been maintained generally, which is highly complimentary to you and your employes throughout the various departments of your plant, which shows that all are endeavoring to produce the highest quality possible under existing circumstances.

There are times when the average varies, but such is not allowed to continue.

Your paper is constructed in a fine workmanship manner, ably edited, neatly laid out, well and uniformly printed which we wish to commend you upon and which we believe is deserving and is valuable to the general moral of your office when such is given if earned. It encourages greater efforts by all to continue and improve at every opportunity. Therefore, we are not offering any criticisms at this time, but will continue to keep a careful check on your paper and should we find the standard depreciating you will be advised immediately with suggestions to correct same.

With best wishes, we remain

Yours very truly,

Recalls "Oldest Man"

BITLIS, Turkey — (AP) — Everybody knows Zaro Agha's claim to be 156 and the oldest man in the world, but now comes one who says he rocked Zaro Agha to sleep in the latter's babyhood.

Timur Agha, native of a nerby village, says he is 165 years old and that exactly 120 years ago, Zaro's family came to his village with their 5-year-old son. Old Timur thus concedes 125 years to his better known rival.

"Zaro was such a pretty baby," Timur says, "that I used to love to dandle him on my knee. He liked me a lot, too."

The village in which Timur lives is made up of 30 houses, populated entirely by his own descendants.

Cost Her $4.25 To Reduce 65 Pounds

"Worth It," Miss Bates Says.

If you're young and fat read what Miss Bates of Beech, Iowa, has to say about Kruschen Salts—if you are middle age or old Kruschen shows you the way to lose fat the SAFE way.

"I took one bottle of Kruschen Salts a month for five months. It amounted to $4.25 and I reduced 65 pounds, but it was worth it. Imagine just 22 years old and weighing what I did. I could not enjoy myself as other girls did. I could not get the clothes I wanted. I think it is wonderful the results Kruschen Salts give."

To lose fat the safe, sane way—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—eat less fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar that costs but a small sum lasts 4 weeks. Get it at John S. Gibson Drug Co. or any drugstore in the world—but be sure for your health's sake to ask for and get Kruschen Salts. It's the little daily dose that does it. —Adv.

Italian Colony Is Planned For Libya

Northern Africa Sold to Corporation for Farm Development

ROME—(AP)—Italy is seeking a new outlet in northern Africa for surplus population by colonizing land seized from rebel tribes in Cirenaica, Libya, during the 10 years insurrection just ended.

A $2,500,000 corporation has been given exclusive rights to carry out the plan under supervision of a government bureau.

The land, most of which must be irrigated, will be sold to the corporation at two American cents an acre. The corporation will put in the necessary improvements and offer it to peasant families on easy terms.

CHANGE OF LIFE

FOR over fifty years, women have been taking Cardui for troubles like Mrs. M. C. Weatherford, of Tahlequah, Okla., describes below: "I had spells (during change of life) when I could not stand up. I had the headache all the time. I was dizzy and had attacks of nausea. I read about Cardui, so I got a bottle to try. It helped me so much that I continued to take it until I was entirely past the critical period of my life. I have given Cardui to my girls. It has been a wonderful medicine in my home."

Cardui is a mild, purely vegetable tonic.

Face Your Obligation

You Are Needed Now More Than Ever Respond to Hope's Call For Leaders and Workers

THIS BATTLE against the depression is everybodys fight. We are all vitally interested in winning, and to bring about these results we will have to work harder, think harder and plan better than we have had to do in several years. The feeling of discouragement has seemed to grip us all, but we must have faith in our community and the courage to carry out a program for a successful year and work for that goal that knows no disappointments. Most of us have nothing to lose, all to win—so work to win and cooperate in the one great effort for success. Every farmer, every business and every industry is interested in this fight. The trend should follow the avenues through which we are bettered and fortify the weak spots of the past. Dairying has been profitable in the past, so let dairying, hogs and poultry fill in the gaps where the losses took place the last two years. Live on the farm and can all the fruits, vegetables and meats that can't be marketed for home consumption during the winter months. Can a big supply while you are at it, as a good supply wil lenable you to help the community in case some misfortune should again overtake this Hope section. Live at home and work for the advancement and prosperity of your community.

Make Dairying an Important Farming Operation

Every Community has some particular production in which it excels other sections in quality and quantity and let the Hope territory become known as the dairying center of the great state of Arkansas. Prices may go down and drouth may overtake us, but we always have the possibility of feeding ourstock, if the feed is raised on the farm and we plan ahead by keeping a stock of feed in reserve for just such misfortunes. Raise an abundance of hogs, poultry and turkeys to feed on the skimmed milk and fatten some stock for the market. These will not interfere with your farm program of cotton, corn and other products, because you can raise just as much cotton with dairy cow and other stock on the place and you save the cost of a big fertilizer bill every year by keeping them besides having a sure income coming in monthly.

Let's Make HOPE VICINITY
Live and Rear a Family in Arkansas
The Best Community in Which to FACE YOUR OBLIGATION—YOU ARE NEEDED NOW MORE THAN EVER.
